SUMMARY.

At the opening of the Imperial Conference Mr. Asquith welcomed the delegates, and outlined the scope of the conference.

The Prime Minister emphasised the non-party character of the conference.

Mr. W. L. Fisher referred to the gain that would accrue by the conference meeting in the centre of the dominions.

Mr. Fisher also mentioned the necessity for elasticity in matters which might be the outcome of the conference.

General Balfour said that concord and harmony were the basis of the conference.

Mr. Joseph Ward moved that an Imperial Council be created on the grounds of the conference.

He believed that in 25 years the combined population of the overseas dominions would exceed that of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Joseph Ward had not concluded his speech when the conference adjourned.

The King has ordered a stand to be erected to enable the aged poor and children to witness the coronation.

Mr. W. L. Fisher moved the second reading of the Bill for the Imperial Council.

General Balfour has announced a settlement of the Indian trouble in the Transvaal.

Russia has notified Turkey that the concentration of troops on the Montenegrin frontier is a danger to peace.

The directors of the Suez Canal will reduce the canal dues from January 1 next from 71 to 6 francs per ton.

The Imperial Chamber of Deputies has passed a bill providing for amnesty for political prisoners.

Peace prevails in the northern portion of the frontier.

Rejoice was celebrated with great enthusiasm throughout the State yesterday.

Rejoice songs were sung in the schools, and were unfurled, and holiday sports enjoyed.

The various public demonstrations were greatly attended, beautiful weather prevailing.

The Chamber of Commerce demonstration, at the Royal Exchange, was marked by enthusiasm.

Addresses were delivered by Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher and Mr. Fisher Smith, M.P.

The gathering of citizens in the Great Hall of the University was a successful function.

Addresses were given.

The flag of Australia Day was hoisted by several speakers.

The Minister for Education addressed no fewer than six school gatherings between 10 and 12 p.m.

Anniversary Day was celebrated by the Roman Catholic section of the community yesterday for the first time.

The Irish flag and the Australian ensign were flown from the central tower of St. Mary's Cathedral.

The Union Jack was not hoisted.

THE FIVE NATIONS.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

THE OPENING SESSION.

PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH.

UNITS IN A GREAT UNITY.

LONDON, May 24.

The Imperial Conference was opened yesterday, and set for two and a half days.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, who presided, opened the proceedings with an address accepting half an hour's forenoon for the opening of the conference.

After making sympathetic reference to the death of King Edward and of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Prime Minister went on to emphasise the non-party character of the conference. He said it was a happy coincidence that the time chosen for the conference would enable the statesmen of the self-governing colonies to take a personal part in the deliberations.

The Empire, he continued, was made up of countries that were not geographically continuous or even contiguous. It even did not draw its unifying force from any common language or race.

It was a political organisation which was more existence ruled out the possibility of war between populations numbering something like a third of the human race.

There were two things in the self-governing British Empire unique in the history of great political organisations. The first was the reign of law, and the second was the combination of local autonomy, absolutely untrammelled, with loyalty to a common head.

In the early Victorian era there were two rough and ready solutions for colonial problems. One was centralisation, or government from Downing Street, by which the disintegration, by which each community as it grew to manhood without enlightenment, start an independent existence. After seventy years of Imperial evolution neither theory commanded the faintest support in any part of the Empire. Now the solution was found in the form of the dominions, with a life-blood of our polity. It was one that they intended to remain united, but units in a greater unity.

There were some proposals on the agenda paper aiming at some closer political union in the sense of an advisory council, without offering any opinion he ventured to observe that they would not be in the least of the value of the elasticity and flexibility in the Imperial organisation. He trusted the Imperial Government would be able to offer acceptable suggestions in relation to the conference.

Mr. Asquith referred to the far-reaching results of the last Defence Conference, and the inauguration of the Canadian and Australian fleets, which he regarded as important to the spirit of self-reliance. It was highly desirable, he said, that they should take together of the possible risks and dangers to which they were exposed in common, and weigh carefully the adequacy and the reciprocal obligations of the contributions they were making to provide against them.

He believed there was throughout the conference one spirit and one purpose—to make the Empire and all its parts a more complete and effective instrument for the maintenance of corporate unity along the lines of British liberty.
